A Note from Our President

Greetings Fellow NCCCLA Members!

Time is flying by! Summer session is over for us and soon it will be time for the fall semester to start.

Jennifer Seagraves and her committee have been working all summer to scout out some awesome locations for our 2020 NCCCLA Conference. We continue to rotate the conference between our sections, so keep reading the newsletter to find out the details! We will let the Conference Committee get back to planning and look for more information to follow!

Bring a friend to your next District meetings, be sure to take pictures and send them in.

A quick update from the Board. Every few years the question seems to arise, are we a 501(3)c non-profit and if not why. Sally Goodman, Immediate Past President has spent a significant amount of time investigating that. She presented her findings at the last Board Meeting and the Board voted to not pursue becoming a 501(3)c. In brief, it is a costly process and would require us to hire a lawyer and make our tax filings very complicated. I would like to thank Sally for investigating and most importantly documenting for the Board what she discovered. Remember you can read all the minutes from the Board Meetings online.

Please continue to share thoughts and ideas with me (cheryl.coyle@cpc.edu) or any of the Board members. We would love to see some new faces take on roles at either the district level or volunteering in areas you have suggestions for. I am looking forward to working with everyone.

Have a great summer!

Cheryl

NCCCLA Advocacy News

Helen Colevins and Libby Stone attended State Library Legislative Day (SLLD) with the North Carolina School Library Media Association (NCSLMA) in Raleigh on May 20, 2019. Dr. Anthony Chow led the group through a training session, then school librarians served ice cream and met with legislators to discuss two primary focus points: 1) dedicated, equitable funding for ALL public school libraries, and 2) a full-time, certified school librarian in EVERY school library. The impact for school libraries: 27 meetings were held, close contacts were made including with the Governor's Office, and one legislator even agreed to write a bill with NCSLMA to help fund Title I school libraries this coming year! Way to go, NCSLMA!!!

Surry Community College Library

Surry Community College has been awarded a 2019-2020 LSTA grant for $42,433.00 to continue the Surry County Digital Heritage project. Church in Community is a collaborative digital history project to continue the Saving Our Communities project. Churches are (and were) integral elements of life in communities in Surry County, NC. There are at least 165 churches in Surry County and the history of these churches is important in documenting community life in the 19th and 20th centuries. This project will preserve both the written histories of churches in Surry County and will also add a photographic-rich record to the Surry Digital Heritage website. Surry Community College Library is the coordinator for the digital history project. Principal partners in this project will be: the Mount Airy Museum of Regional History, three Surry County branches of the Northwestern Regional Library, Surry County African American Historical and Genealogical Society, Surry County Genealogical Society, and the Surry County Historical Society. For more information, contact Sebrina Mabe, Project

Manager or David Wright, Project Director.
